Communities need to connect at their hearts if they are to successfully help today's troubled children and families. That's why the Child Welfare League of America is devoting its 2001 national conference to helping you connect with those in your community who are driven by the same cause—protecting and nurturing America's children.

If you're a board leader, frontline social worker, administrator, CEO, juvenile justice professional, educator, child mental health practitioner, student, foster parent, legislator, or child advocate, or if you work in any way with children, please plan on joining us.

Watch the mail this fall for your conference registration materials, or check our website at www.cwla.org for additional information.
